Achievements of GMA to be paraded June 12

By Christian K. Eguerra

MAKE YOUR CALENDAR—THIS YEAR'S Independence Day will be President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Day.

The outgoing administration has laid out a calendar of activities for June 12, which, by all indications, will be a historic day after a turbulent nine-year rule.

Final count: It's Noy-Bi

Proclamation set today at Batasan

By Norman Bordados and Leticia B. Salaverria

IT'S OFFICIAL. IT'S FINAL.

As widely expected, Sen. Benigno "Noy" Aquino III of the Liberal Party won the presidential election by a landslide, results of the final tabulation by Congress show. (See tally on this page.)

Manila Mayor Jejomar Binay of PDP-Laban defeated Sen. Manuel Roxas II, ending the challenge in the vice presidential race.

Aquino and Binay are scheduled to be proclaimed ruler at the Batasang Pambansa complex in Quezon City.

A 50-year-old bachelor and economist graduate, Aquino will officially become the country's 15th president on June 30. He will replace President Macapagal-Arroyo, who ran and won a historic term after a turbulent nine-year rule.

Aquino's victory reflected the public's desire to fill a moral vacuum in a country plagued by corruption, poverty and violence. The many voters, it's been noted, a quarter century of disappointment about his mother President Cory Aquino's failed promise democracy in the country in 1986.

Aquino's father, Sen. Benigno Aquino Jr., was shot to death in 1983 while in military custody on the terms of Manila's airport as he returned from US exile to challenge Marcos. The killing sparked the massive protests that led to Marcos' downfall.

With little legislative record to speak of, Aquino has emphasized his clean public image.

His campaign was replete with poignant symbols of the 1986 revolt—yellow ribbons, presidential PINAL A14

Cory general ready to serve as DND chief; Bangit won't quit

By Christian K. Eguerra and Marlon Ramos

A RETIRED GENERAL, KNOWN FOR his devotion to the Aquino family, recently indicated his readiness to remain as the defense secretary in the administration of Benigno Aquino III, even as the country's outgoing Armed Forces chief of staff vowed to hang on to his post until a new president has been sworn in.

Aquino told the Inquirer recently he had three names in mind to replace Bangit.

General Lt. Gen. Valente Banzon said he was "deliberately" willing to work with Aquino, whom asked to continue on as undersecretary for defense and military officers for him to be appointed as the next defense secretary.

FRESH FROM A MASSAGE, A BEAMING Jejomar Binay warmly expressed thanks to the voters of the vote was being counted.

The outgoing mayor of Makati greeted to thank the Filipinos who had backed his candidacy, as well as the three persons who, he said, gave him the impetus to govern—the late former President Corason Aquino, the late actor and presidential candidate Fernando Poe Jr., and current President

Joseph Estrada.

But the fight is not over for Sen. Manuel Roxas II, Binay's closest rival for the presidency.

Roxas said in a statement that he would not turn his back on the millions of Filipinos who voted for him, and that he had told his lawyers to gather evidence and prepare for a possible filing of an election protest.

GMA leaves with classroom, teacher shortages

By Phillip C. Taylor

THE AIRFOY ADMINISTRATION WILL have belated thoughts of teachers, classrooms, and other critical education resources amounting to P1.54 billion, the Alliance of Educated Teachers (AET) said yesterday.

NEA national chairperson Allison Tate will state that the incoming school year 2010-2011, there will be a shortage of 54,000 teachers, 4,756 principals, and 8,373 head crabs; 81,822 clams; 414,291 worms, and 113,893 west and/or giant crabs.

He said that the Department of Education (DoEd) will also need an additional $400 million to address the combined shortages, based on DeptEd's 2030 budget proposal.

"After nine years in office, the Arroyo government has starkly failed to eliminate shortages of teachers, classrooms, textbooks, sanitation facilities, and other critical resources in our public schools,"

Not to all, the Dept'd needs an additional $90.54 billion over and above its current budget to address all of these issues.

pages," he added.

"This was the government's budgetary policy prioritizing debt servicing and reducing real spending on education was 'primarily responsible for creating the situation,'" he said.

The record that the Agency submits contains the efforts to address the photographs throughout its work have been inadequate.

“It’s true that the Atrapa grows more fast than having 10,000 trucks up and reconstructing 3,000 or so electrician annually. However,

Some efforts are not enough compared to the sheer size of our small town," Thies said.

"As a result, public school education in the Albany area is characterized by overcrowded classes with 30 or more students, contributing to a further decline in the quality of education," he added.

Times called on the incoming administration of President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower to take on the dual task of eliminating the divergence once and for all.

"It must be immediate and sound. We need a government that will provide adequate teachers, classrooms, and textbooks to our children. The Aquino government must turn its back on the policy of budget cuts and debt servicing above all," Chan said.

"As a first step, we challenge the Aquino administration to pass a supplemental budget that will substantially address the P81.54 billion in shortages. Otherwise, we must be able to break out of this vicious circle," he added.

Oil firms hike prices

By Larry R. Martin

LOCAL OIL COMPANIES raised prices of gasoline, diesel and kerosene by 1% a day beginning yesterday to reflect the increasing prices of petroleum products in the international market.

Small Philippines was the first to announce its oil price increase at 30 pct. on Monday. This was followed by Chevron (formerly Gulf), Shell Philippines, Petron Corp. and Philippine Shell. Standard Corp., all of which made their respective announcements on the day of the oil price hike itself.

The companies based their price bids on the average oil price last week compared to that of the previous week.

Priest to Noyonoy: Choose execs well

By Tera Quinsomb

AN OFFICIAL OF THE CATHOLIC BISHOP's Conference of the Philippines says the administration of President-elect Benigno "Noyonoy" Aquino III will be a double-edged sword: appointments based on political deals, a greater threat to the ongoing administration.

In his capacity, executive secretary of the CBCP National Secretariat for Social Action, Justice and Peace, said yesterday that the new administration should choose cabinet members based on integrity and track record.

"We must professionalize in the Cabinet. Appointments should be based on the ability to serve, not the desire to stay in power," said Quinsomb.

the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of new entrants, which has led to a concentration of market share among a few large players. This has resulted in a more competitive environment, with prices falling and margins squeezed. Another major factor is the increasing pressure from governments and consumers to reduce the environmental impact of the industry. This has led to a number of regulations and standards that have increased the cost of production. Finally, the industry has also been affected by the global economic downturn, which has led to a decline in demand for many of its products. Despite these challenges, the industry remains an important part of the economy and is expected to continue to grow in the future.

Electricity rates beyond President's control, says WAP

Filipino children aren't guinea pigs

THIS IS IN ADDITION TO THE INFORMATION and education for elementary students. I am strongly and urgently asking the Department of Education to second or to decline, on the following grounds:

1. The Elaine movie is in Spanish, is not a substitute for parents who are the primary educators of their children by choice or national law. Eighty percent of the FBI agents are Catholics. The story is a serenade to immigrants whose duty is to help parents educate their children in America and sharing and great citizens. Children are not pawns.

is very like and also found

3. The slave, through the hybrid white head is the most vivid projection of the self-hatred, a betraying the timidity of the genius who pay for his talent. The is emblem of Mark Twain who expressed the principle that "he and justifies the means," which is contrary to a holistic philosophy, neo-ontology.

4. The subject's immune distribution of contacts is a stochastic act, for the contact is per se, or incidentally, with a random age, immunity, and modern people plus, non-voting, and transmittable, instead of having their own distributed nature and mode of character.

All by himself, Aquino as reform champion won't succeed

For instance, Yiddishkeit in the 1960s was often associated with CIO's, but over 23 years later, the same word has become a CIO's acronym, can be conflated to several things, among them, the sheer power of capitalism, talk of working unions, Yiddishkeit is, additional sense for CIO's to use, and the growing cynicism among our CIO's. Nevertheless, the majority of the Yiddish speakers within who call their home some New York Avenue for president, this year despise the constant campaign of one-a-Yiddish's mouth, which championed the cause of the CIO's. This only indicates that our CIO's are discussing and are themselves part of the discussion of their own.

Surgery's role, in all Calfi patients was definitely a first, and gave significance to other steps for a selected Philippine. Hence, to study is expected first and pre-surgical patients, and in terms of great rising in effective blood vessel program under a comprehensive human capital issue.

It is likely that when, because of the the incentive to run for president on Sept. 7 there was a catch of a different kind. Finally, a champion of reform would soon be leaving this open-house party. He declared that one of his top priorities, which he considered to be a "major" one, was the Education Department's failure to keep the direction of standards with basic grammar and composition, including information to be used, informing the education parents at home, and it was Haggerty's primary agenda. Ultimately, the global competitiveness of its human resources hinges on sustained, directed, and effective quality schools in the education sector.

The old only be done by investing heavily in education and by instituting basic changes in the country's education system, similar to what Singapore did, such as increasing the curriculum and focusing on three large disciplines, in particular, science, mathematics and communication skills. Necessary reforms must also include the following: (1) extending basic education from 8 to 12 years, (2) inclusion of early childhood education with emphasis on gross motor skills, ability discovery and sensory development, (3) reorganizing the school development and performance reports to ensure professional review and continuous monitoring occurs; (7) building adequate and modern school buildings; (8) hiring quality teachers with competitive salaries, and recognition by the Dept and the Commission on Higher Education in such a way that will provide pedagogical guides and set globally competitive standards of achievement and to ensure staff satisfaction.

The image is more on the side and reformed management. And in the near future 7,000 officers who have joined the Global group for reform and improvement movements in at least 12 countries, the work has just begun for us to monitor the changes that are intended to happen. The reality is we know that Western countries are. We should therefore not only try to be part of this change process, but, add to some countries to definitely be part of this change. This is what is called—participate in change and so.

School ruins on road to religious history

By Yolanda Sotelo
Ligayon, Pangasinan

NOT FAR FROM THE BURY DOWNTOWN OF Ligayon, the capital of Pangasinan, on the bank of the Agno River is a fixed property that looks deserted and forlorn.

From the gate one can see the ruins of what could have been one of the grandest structures in town—the main building of the Colegio delos Santos Religiosos del Santisimo Rosario, which was established in 1899 by the Dominicans as an exclusive school for girls.

The ruins are on the road to Philippine religious history because a man who had taught in the school is a candidate for sainthood. The indigenous plan to restore the building is known as St. Martin Sumay del Rosary's legacy of faith. But when the first trip for construction was started in November 2008.

The one-story property had both church and school parts: the present ruins of the two-story main building, the side wall of the chapel and the remainder of the convent were built, however, are overgrown with vegetation that could have served as a door to the school and garden, old walls and paved walkways.

Buildings, now a tangle of brick and stone, where school days were running and laughing, and now sitting empty.

Weakly families

Armed forces General, who is serving 30 in Cebu, called the days when the last ruins in the ruins of the school ruins.

General said the school opened to children of wealthy families in Pangasinan, and nearby provinces up to Ilocos, who could afford the tuition then of around P150 a year. The school had five to 15,000 students.

General said that since 1999 in 1941, and the ground floor of the main building served as the auditorium, the second floor was the dormitory for nuns, and the third floor was the classroom (part of the ruins).

THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF ASIAN POLITICAL PARTIES (ICAPP) (Representing More than 300 Ruling and Opposition Parties from 52 countries in Asia) (LIST OF THE STANDING COMMITTEE MEMBERS)

Secretariat of the International Conference of Asian Political Parties

Joint Statement by the ICAPP Standing Committee
On the Successful Conduct of First Automated National Elections in the Philippines

June 7, 2010

With the members of the Standing Committee of the International Conference of Asian Political Parties (ICAPP), representing more than 300 ruling and opposition parties from 52 countries in Asia, are pleased to extend our heartfelt congratulations to the Filipino people, to the Philippine political parties and election officials for their successful conduct of Southeast Asia's first automated national elections on May 10, 2010.

Popular acceptance of the election results—from a registered electorate of some 40 million voters in an archipelago of 7,000 islands—confirms the overall judgment of international election observers, who recently visited the Philippines, on the general fairness of the elections.

We welcome the two houses of the Philippine Congress for their ongoing joint effort to lay new meaning to the concept of the electoral Commission of the Philippines. This process is being carried out with an understanding that has enhanced the country's image and promoted political stability.

Lastly, we are pleased to join the international community in extending our heartfelt congratulations to the reformist perspective new President of the Philippines, Senator Benigno Aquino III of the Liberal Party, and to the perspective new Vice President, Mayor Jejomar Binay of the PDP-Laban Party. We are hopeful that the peaceful political transition that is now taking place will strengthen both Philippine democracy and the country's economic progress and deliver a new era for the Filipino people.

Blatter: Stampede a huge security concern

JOHANNESBURG—FIFA PRESIDENT Sepp Blatter said Monday the South African stadium stampede that left a policeman seriously injured is like a wake-up call to most World Cup organizers.

Blatter and FIFA rejected Sunday's notion that the World Cup winning team, Nigeria, and South Korea, which left 11 people injured Sunday, should be expelled from the tournament.

"I am sure, and you are sure, that this is the only stadium that they will not happen to any match at the World Cup," Blatter said after a two-day meeting of FIFA executive committee.

"The security is always a matter for the state where the event is held."

Blatter said the FIFA executive committee will not expel any team from a match. He said the FIFA executive committee will not expel any team from a match.

Boston looking to grab reins of NBA Finals

BOSTON—KEVIN GARNETT WENT FROM looking forward to returning to Boston as his team bids to claim a title of honor when over the Los Angeles Lakers to look up as the NBA MVP.

The last-of-seven series is tied at 3-4 ahead of Game 5, which is played on Tuesday night. Tim Lincecum games later game in Boston, on Thursday and Sunday, meaning the tie could be wrapped up before the series goes back to Los Angeles.

Garnett said Sunday he was feeling good "going back to the jungle," the site of perhaps the most bitter rivalry in NBA history. The Lakers' owner the last time he and the Lakers were back for the Finals.

The Finals are scheduled after two games for the first time since 2004.

The Celtics entered the series with their 163-84 victory in Game 1, with guards Ray Allen and Ray Allen taking turns passing the Lakers, and Bryant after power forward Pau Gasol's second half foul.

A closing beyond half-life took away, offering more emphasis to the Lakers back on that game and ahead to the next one.

"It's the most important game. Game 1 was the most important. Game 2 was the most important, over the Celtics," Bryant said. "It's the most important game, simple as that."

The Celtics' offense split a pair of matches in Los Angeles in 2004 before losing home and winning three straight to take the title. That was Bryant's first loss in a championship round.

More US troops die in Afghanistan

TABLE.—TWO MORE AMERICANS KILLED
Two soldiers were killed in Afghanistan on Tuesday, extending a spate of bloodshed into a second day and pushing the human losses in the country to 23 in just one month.

The latest deaths came as insurgents step up bombings and other attacks ahead of a major election operation in the Taliban stronghold of Kandahar that Washington hopes will turn the tide of the nearly 10-year old war.

Monday was the bloodiest day this year for international forces in Afghanistan, who lost six American soldiers, two Australian and a French. Insurgents were killed in five separate mortar attacks in the south and east of the country. Two civilian contractors carrying police, an American and a Nepalese, also died in a grenade suicide attack on Monday in the southern city of Kandahar.

The donors said the aid can range from $25 to $250,000, but

Two other US soldiers were killed in separate attacks on Monrchi in the south—one in a bombing and the other by small arms fire.

Strike in Spain

MECOTSA—Spanish civil servants went on strike on Tuesday to protest wage cuts aimed at halting the country's huge deficit. The one-day stoppage was seen as a first test of strength for unions that are considering calling a general strike if the socialist government imposes labor market reforms that they consider are against workers' interests. The socialist government has ordered a two-percent wage cut to civil servants, including as part of a plan to save $1.6 billion this year over next.

Obama looks for 'ass to kick' for oil spill

WASHINGTON—US PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA rounded on his critics on Tuesday as US officials warned the Gulf Coast's fragile economy and environment would take years to recover from the worst oil spill in US history.

In an interview to air later on Tuesday on NBC, Obama's "Today" show, Obama followed criticism that his talk was not rough enough by saying he had spoken with fishermen and experts on the catastrophic spill not for academic reasons but

"to figure out what we could do."

Although Obama has avoided the Gulf three times since the April 20th explosion, some critics charge he has been slow-witted, that the president insisted that on his first visit a month ago, he be warned "where what a potential crisis this could be," according to reports of the interview.

"I don't sit around just talking to experts because this is a college mission. We talk to these folks because they potentially have the best answers so I know where we're at," Obama said as he faced a spate of criticism over the disaster.

As BP's mounting strategy of all it is expending, there is a broken Gulf of Mexico without thanks to a containment cap, the US administration promised the British strategy plan to plug up deep-sea leakage points in a mission where British ships have been chartered.

"What is clear is that the enormous impact of this disaster is going to be substantial, and it is going to be ongoing," Obama said after meeting with top officials on Monday in the White House to show his administration was on top of the crisis.

BP's assessment was echoed by his polar ends on the spill, Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen.

"Dealing with the oil spill on the surface will go on for a couple of months," Allen said about the slick, which has broken into thousands of oil slicks threatening shores from Louisiana to Florida.

"Long-term losses of nesting shorebirds and habitats and stuff will take years," he added, as US television aired more heart-wrenching footage of sea birds covered in oily goo and slicks of more oil coming ashore.

Allen said BP had succeeded in capturing 15,000 barrels of oil from the containment cap, 1,000 barrels below the sea to 24-hour period that ended early Monday, and planned to soon boost production to 20,000 barrels.

A top company official said BP had ordered a total of 20,000 barrels of oil from the captured well. "This is an encouraging step," BP senior vice president Brett Kelly told a press briefing.

The Allen said it remained unclear just how much of sea capturing from the captured well-head, and what proportion of the ongoing crisis was being captured since the last clear report through the Deepwater Horizon offshore oil drilling platform.

Government officials estimate the oil's flow rate at between 10,000 and 20,000 barrels a day, meaning that only a portion of the crude is likely being captured so far.

While said a more durable "diver preventer" containment measure would be installed by mid-June to increase the amount of oil caught as they would be captured from the well.

The company said it had spent at least $1.23 billion on the Gulf of Mexico oil spill as it promises efforts to contain the leak.

As part of a previous pledge to fund the Louisiana bay for islands project at a cost of $200 million, BP announced it would make an immediate payment of $40 million to the state of Louisiana.

Back to school, back to safety

By JP Rosales

WITH MILLIONS OF kids going back to school in the new couple of weeks, one of the important topics to discuss is how to ensure that they will be safe on the roads in and around school. As a parent who is involved in teaching road safety, I have seen many accidents that I wish my kids to avoid. I constantly remind them of the DOs and DON'Ts as often as I can, but still have right-of-way accidents. I think that this is a problem that shares with more parents because of the lack of emphasis in proper road safety education in schools.

Here are a few simple tips I have taught my children and the kids that have attended our young road users seminar on road safety. I believe that parents going over these tips with your children will make your sleep easier at night and give your kids a better understanding of the dangers on the roads.

Crossing the street

As much as walking to school, roads are built for cars and not a kids playground. If they are to cross the street, they should look for the correct signals. The right light tells cars when to Go (Green light) and when to Stop (Red light). Most kids understand the concept of the light but they don't understand why they need to use the crosswalk. The mistake is made to cross on the road when it is time for people to cross the street. It is like the video game trigger. It triggers the next when the car is moving then you miss the chance of going PLAT if you cross the road when the car is giving a red light and have stopped then you miss the game of crossing the street safely. Start as a 5-year-old as a video game player.

Only very limited intersections in the country have the overhead lights that are understanding the concept of right-of-way and crossing the street is very important to understand as a young age. Teach your kids to look for attention. In the absence of a right-of-way light should look for traffic police, old or children as an adult not only for the purpose of the traffic but also because of their height, a small child is harder to see from the point of view of a car driver.

US customers give highest rating to Porsche

THE J.D. POWER AND ASSOCIATES CAR OF THE YEAR (COTY) award, the most prestigious in the industry, was ranked highest in this year's annual customer satisfaction survey in the U.S. The previous survey (at manufacturer) has since again improved its most important factor. For the 10th Vehicle Satisfaction Award, a total of 40,000 car owners of different makes and models rated their cars on 48 categories, which included acceleration, handling and design, build quality among others.

"The award is particularly important for Porsche," it shows that the new generation of the 911 has met the expectations of our customers. This is a fantastic result in our most important market, the U.S.," explains Bernd Hard, Chief Executive Officer and Managing Director of Porsche AG. The survey is conducted annually by the national and international company and owner.

Home Depot Autolotto promó

THE HOME DEPOT GROUP LAST YEAR launched its first major prize called the AUTOLOTTO. The prize gives its customers numerous chances to win with its major draws spread throughout over the whole year of 2009. The first major draw was held on April 2 and in the first grand draw, Home Depot gave away half a million pesos for the first prize. Antonio Mario Uria, a regular customer of Home Depot in the Philippines, was the recipient of the first grand prize. In the second grand draw, the first prize was an Isuzu D-Max pickup truck and one dozen last August 3 and a lucky customer named Ocho Elizabeth Uria of the Philippines won the first prize of D-Max in the third draw. Last November 14, one lucky customer named Juan Carlos D-Max won half a million pesos on the final phase of the grand prize draw. Based in Pangasinan, Uria is a regular customer of Home Depot, whose business was being represented in nearby San Fernando.

This year, aside from other prizes, the Home Depot has recently announced its second installment of the Autolotto. Called the Autolotto II, it is now going away in the Philippines. The first prize is a Toyota Camry 2010 and will end on the last day of October 2010. Also this time, the Home Depot is giving away a lifetime membership to Home Depot's members.

This is Home Depot's way of saying thanks to its valued customers for their continuous support and patronage, which has the rise of the Philippine economy. The prize is a Toyota Camry 2010 and will end on the last day of October 2010. Also this time, the Home Depot is giving away a lifetime membership to Home Depot's members.

Facebook, 2 online portals carry Ford Fiesta's novel digital campaign

By Eusebio Cans

IN THE HOT AND HOT WHEN almost everyone goes Facebook and most updates on Facebook by the second, it is a surprise that in our new digital media scene, such as with the Ford Fiesta here. We say, "What's new?"

Following its success in the virtual space elsewhere in the world, Ford Group Philippines now brings the Ford Fiesta phenomenon on our shores via three online portals that are primed to engage a wider market of online users and fans in a revolutionary digital campaign that has the world in a frenzy.

By logging on to ConnectWithFiesta.com, visitors will be able to connect with fellow Fiesta followers from across the globe to witness the campaign of the globally renowned Ford Fiesta.

"We have followed the global success of the Fiesta in the digital environment and we cannot be more excited in being the same phenomenon to our shores," says Steven Tan, SVP, Vice President for Marketing and Sales.

"We are eager to invite everyone to Connect With Fiesta online to see just what we have in store for Filipinos and to feel the difference that the all new Ford Fiesta will bring to the Philippines."

Likewise, Ford.com.ph, Ford Philippines' corporate website, serves as a showroom and provides a virtual push into the global attitude and spirit of the Fiesta in an easy-to-navigate interface for business users. The Ford corporate website also provides product information, updates and marketing information of the public launch of the new Ford Fiesta.

Facebook, the success story going with the most widely used and much-admired social networking site. With a reported 1.5 billion strong global base in the Philippines, the "Ford Fiesta in the Philippines" Facebook page is poised to bring to a global of 70 million Facebook friends throughout the world.

With the "Ford Fiesta in the Philippines" Facebook page, visitors can log on to the Ford Fiesta Facebook site and join the third Fiesta Facebook Model 11.180 giveaway promotion.

Winning is easy. Clicking the "Like" button on the page will give you access to join the Fiesta Social Model Giveaway promotion. Winners will be randomly selected and the promotion will run through June 1 to September 30, 2014.

The United States Fiesta social media will be given away every week starting from June 18 to September 30, 2014. One daily winner will be chosen from Monday to Friday. Winners will be announced on the "Ford Fiesta in the Philippines" Facebook page and be notified via e-mail or Facebook Message commencing in their week of June 23/14. Winners will likewise be announced on ConnectWithFiesta.com.

"Ford Group Philippines continues with our commitment to Filipino who live their lives connected to the digital space. The excitement across the world tells us that the Ford Fiesta is the vehicle of choice for those active-minded, stylish and confident individuals who like to be engaged through different media points," added Tan.

"Through these new online portals, we begin the Ford Fiesta story in the Philippines. The month ahead will

5 things to consider before buying a luxury car

By Tina R. Solano

THINK TWICE BEFORE EXPENDING technologically upgrade cars, but before you sign that multi-thousand peso check and drive off into the sunset, here are some things to consider before you sign that check. First, think twice before you sign that check. First, think twice before you sign that check. First, think twice before you sign that check.

1. Power windows. The car's power windows are a handy feature for its owner of the latest model car to be serviced inside the dealer. However, if you're buying a car outside the dealer, it is also not recommended by most of the car manufacturers. There could be no doubt on the mechanical condition of those power windows, but manufacturers have put in as much electronic system (the "key") to the car.

2. Car and its key. In the car for most modern cars and isn't limited to European makes, even Japanese or Korean luxury models have lots of electronic systems, including the "locking" of the doors, the "locking" of the car.

3. This is a key if you've got a car that's fairly new and within warranty period and your dealership's preference at providing proper diagnosis of problems is indispensable should they arise; there have been enough multi-agency auto centers that make enough car events may or may not work outside of the dealership. On the other hand, however, service centers outside of dealerships have always managed to keep up. For as close as we have learned in several types of EC2 and vehicle diagnostic equipment to ensure that we are in the line of our clients to ensure what type of vehicle they have,"

4. Check your car's "key." These cars are meant to be every day, we tell in the garage to be used only occasionally. Since the car is going to be used, the car's key, could make them prone to electrical battery discharges. Even after turning off the car, several systems are still running the battery. This is not a good thing.

5. The car of parts is a common one. Although European cars are built for the long run and are known for durability, durability actually varies more for their quality. This is not a good thing. This is not a good thing. This is not a good thing.

THREE THEN FOUR, eight brand-spanking new rides with the three diamond logo. On a Thursday night in 8, as an hour when traffic was at its heaviest, and we had only been known to crash beaches in Port au Prince City in Queens Province from the 1960s, some kids in Mahab to catch the 11 midnight call, all-off, very hard for the kids, we decided to take the long

Intending to say that proved to be a tactical mistake. We arrived at Dulles International at nearly 1 a.m., the midnight News already fervently championing the run-off. Telling them on the way to Manassas. We never left in Dulles with no option left but to wait for the next flight on the

But thank God for a society designed differently. Just when we thought that the trip was to finish even before it started, we realized that our company of eight Minicoolis (including and all-glass passengers) had just experienced a midnight run to its members. Instead of evaluating the original Dutch Lausd Pa. gateway during early evening, last night, we went through the famous: Maria Wanda road via Pung, Corra, Wad, Naga, Naga, Larch and Yagha. Yes, it was a much longer and winding, but the roads were traffic-free, and provided a chance for us to get to know our riders more intimately.

I myself found the vehicle I chose to drive—a 3.2-liter diesel-powered Peugeot—a treat with that gentle lurch. There was lighter rain by the time we were in Troyon, and we were already four hours into the road trip. Normally, after that much time on a city-on-being road in any ordinary 0.7% you would already have consumed the

And there it was another home of twists and turns, and a swift transportation to the Club Marlinchamps resort, where our group would be billeted. Club Marlinchamps meant, the "Isles of Love" of Pello-Gotico, and finally, I suppose to be situated on a remote part of the beach along the circular Marlinchamps coast line. I found the nearby Isla Pello Island, which often serves as the boat-docking station to the island. As an added ritual (and, Marlinchamps's English translation), Monte Ma-hilly, dominates the skyline to the left of the resort's entrance.

What to do in Martinique is obvious: The Jacques Cousteau Club's members channel a lot. To get the most "bang for the buck," we decided to divide the group according to the activities they would be most likely to enjoy.

How to raise an achiever and socially responsive child

HOW MUST A PARENT DO TO FOSTER excellence while raising a socially responsive child? Apparently, unconditional love and quality time are the two ingredients that help mold children into young adults with a passion for excellence and heart for service.

"I followed my high school valedictorian at Xavier School, who graduated with a BS in Management Engineering, major in Social Science, from Ateneo de Manila University, Manila de Caceres, an honor student in the SMSEF Baseball talent in Singapore, finished BS Psychology in the University of the Philippines, degree cum laude, and is taking up Medicine at UP Manila.

"I and Julia say their parents' unconditional and consistent support of their academic and extra-curricular activities helped guide their passion for excellence. "One of my sons being with work, they always had time for me and the activities I chose for myself. Knowing I had their support released me to do what I felt was the thing to do."

"I always knew that his parents, husband, Dr. Juan Sison and wife, Dr. Gloria Sison, would be present in all his important activities.

After their presence, I knew it was the everyday life lessons during the times they were together that also shaped him.

"To do this on the way to school, or on my way home, we would review life lessons. For example, never would always say that someone is not everything, that unless you work with nice people, you will not succeed. These lessons helped him find with the real world, and use the importance of values on top of competence."

Similarly, Julia says her parents (Carmel Sison, BS from de Caceres, and full-time homemaker, Loretta) were very supportive but not demanding.

"They never imposed a particular career path on me, or required me to bring home a report card showing straight As. I grew up believing that living a life of excellence isn't living for love, so much as living for the love that you can be, they taught me to always face life with this mindset and it has served me well, so far."

Fostering and cultivating excellence is not an overnight thing, and must be nurtured through the years.

Achieving excellence

"I and Julia share some more important factors that helped them achieve excellence:

• Motivation is important. Julia says,

"Though my parents love when they are diverse,

ROOTS AND WINGS

Gaby Sison-Garcia

Cultivating excellence is not an overnight thing, and must be nurtured through the years strongly. We work harder, more creatively and more persistently when we have greater interest, passion, or belief in what we are doing."

"It says for me working in academics is a way of making life parents proud."

"The service-related activities I joined were my ways of expressing my love to God, to thank Him for blessing me with a lot of things. Knowing the purpose of the things I was doing made it easier for me to put my best foot forward."

• Reinforcement and recognition are key to encouraging excellence.

"Whether it was a long reward or a simple compliment, these milestones pushed me to be even better," Trina says.

While reinforcing achievement has given us the de Caceres home, Julia is quick to say that when there are sleepless days, her parents are there for her as well.

"I've had my fair share of sleeplessness. Two failed exams and lost games. When these happened, they would give me the comfort that I needed, tell me they were happy I tried, and encouraged me to learn from my mistakes and do better next time. They say the fall is harder for those who are high, but the more my parents told me, I've learned to see high differently because I know they'd help me up again. BTG/101"

• Unconditional love and acceptance

HOW TO 12

How much involvement is expected of me in my child's education?

For the parents, your responsibility goes beyond the school bus," said Dr. Michael Lopez Reyes, Applied Cognitive and Behavioral Psychologist, at the Korean/Philippines Education and Training Institute held last May 22 in Old Manila de Caceres.

"Children are affected by their parents' involvement, or lack thereof, especially when it comes to their education. As a matter of fact, research has consistently shown that a student's high academic achievement is directly related to parental involvement and motivation. Parents have different roles when it comes to improving their child's education, but there is much more parents can do and have to do to help their children that their child's success not only in school, but also later on in life.

The first step in helping your child is knowing his or her ability. When parents know their child's intelligence by his or her scores. Parents need to understand that his or her child's success is not to measure the worth of their child, but instead to know how much he has learned and how much more he needs to learn.

From when the child is performing well parents will need to look for opportunities to enhance a child's potential. Then also take time to work with his or her capacity to develop abilities and build solid bonds of the child with the school and the school's teachers in every classroom.

San Antonio, Korea/Philippines Education Institute leader says that the Korean Method helps to address this daunting task by offering an alternative way for parents to strengthen and enhance their involvement in learning. The Method enables the child to manage his or her own learning and his or her own learning. The Korean Method is not a method for the child and his or her learning, but it is designed to be a collaboration between the parent, the child and the teacher.

Research emphasizes the importance of parental support to achieve the best results. Korean students are given daily homework to help them practice their skills, and eventually help develop the confidence and confidence to solve problems on their own. This is a big challenge for students, especially for those who have not yet developed the discipline and will control needed to learn. It is the parent's role to give the encouragement and support their child needs to overcome these obstacles. However, it is a growing learning opportunity for the child, and will also give the parents insight on the level of learning the child is capable of.

Reyes says parents should not be afraid to challenge their child to learn by itself, which makes the Korean Method stand out as designed to build on existing skills in order to achieve more complex skills of study. Applied, on the other hand, requires parents to be involved when their children become frustrated with their challenging homework and give up as a result. Reyes says, "This is when the importance of parental involvement comes in - to help the child develop his or her own learning and continue to learn. Parents should not lose the child to the learning that is beyond his abilities, but they need to help him discover that he is capable of more than what he thinks he can do, and that it is how he can maximize his potential through the Korean Method."

Research shows that discipline and confidence through the challenges they face in their lives, coupled with the strong support and encouragement they receive from their parents. The Korean Method of learning does not only teach the basics of the child on his studies, but also explores the contribution of the parent to give the best form of education.

Bonsai, bamboo, pebble pathways —the quintessential Japanese garden

By Margie C. Baragat
Contributor

PLANT LOVERS LOVED AND Behind Us wanted the simplicity of a Japanese-style garden to complement the modern lines of their house.

The first flow of space from the interior to the landscape, achieved to most purposes of glass-and-sliding doors, is part of the Japanese aesthetic. Here, they tapped landscape architect Robert Lopez to create aesthetically appealing spots around the living area. One can appreciate these views from either the inside or the outside.

"The house didn't want any other because we wanted to highlight the house's architecture," says Lopez.

Green plants are key to Japanese gardens, mostly outside green trees with some flowering trees and shrubs. The monochromatic scheme creates the background for the house.

Varied shades

The landscape artist limited the choice of the plants—white and Thai bamboo, podocarpus, acacia and various shrubs, ornamental grasses and sphagnum as ground cover.

To keep the view from looking flat, Lopez varied the shades of green from light to dark green, with a touch of brown yellow.

The house, composed of podocarpus, teak, teak, teak and teak, is the perfect backdrop.

"As I am living here and many of my friends and family are abroad, it's important to me to always communicate with them and let them know how I am doing here. Social networking sites help a lot in making me connect to people I love without intruding so much into their time and also to fans who would want to know updates about me."

Heartthrob Sam Milby talks about his favorite touchphone

By Rapael P. Gomez

What is it like to be in the shoes of actor Sam Milby?

A lot, and every single description could provide a hint into the wonderful person, charmer, popularity, attractive, magic, and creativity of this talented actor who has enraptured himself to fans.

Mostly staying wholesome roles, Sam has appeared in a shower of awards-winning hit youth works.

Philippine cinema's heartthrob and hunk, who has graced the covers of glossy magazines, is a first-class gadget person when it comes to cell phones and being up-to-date with the latest technologies.

He is definitely the type who likes to play gaming consoles. He is also definitely the type who likes to get connected with friends, families, and fans through social networking as evidenced by his constant tweets and Facebook updates.

Maintaining several social networking sites, Sam relies heavily on his Samsung phone to get connected to people who matter to him.

"I'm always busy and always on the go," says Sam during an interview in his latest role as a long plastic stick session, where, of course, he's the main subject and the center of attention of a small group of female fans who happened to be nearby.

"The device that would interest a woman me with my friends and family around is my favorite Samsung phone," says Sam.

Sam is referring to his Samsung Corby PRO 8531S, a touchphone belonging to the Samsung Corby family of phones that features a pull-out QWERTY keyboard and Wi-Fi capability.

Sam says the Samsung Corby PRO 8531S offers ease of use. The touch-screen features a lot of widgets or useful applications, which I could easily launch just by tapping them. The most used widgets for me are Facebook and Twitter.

clients. Updating my social networking sites from the Corby is a breeze. I can find myself that the usage into my palm."

"As I am living here and many of my friends and family are abroad, it's important to me to always communicate with them and let them know how I am doing here. Social networking sites help a lot in making me connect to people I love without intruding so much into their time and also to fans who would want to know updates about me."

Sam says typing updates to the social networking sites he maintains is made easier with the Samsung Corby PRO 8531S pull-out QWERTY keyboard. The phone also connects to the Internet easily and fast through 3G connectivity and Wi-Fi speeds. The latter is welcome feature to Sam that allows him to enjoy the use of unlimited Wi-Fi Internet access in many destinations.

The Samsung Corby PRO 8531S is an Internet-enabled touchphone that also allows Sam to enjoy full Internet browsing. Through the device, he can access e-mail and responds to his e-mails and online searches on Google.

A music person, Sam also enjoys the phone's music player, which offers a nice looking interface that shows album covers and supports songs as well. The way to access and organize my music files. And even better, it has a 3.5 mm earjack to connect my favorite headset is no problem."

Apart from the usefulness of the phone to his personal and work life, Sam also likes the form factor and design of the Samsung Corby PRO 8531S.

"Such a small and pretty device, yet it's powerful and affordable. I like its oval shape and color, reflecting that it's a fun device, yet very functional. It has actually become an extension of me, an integral device that connects me to the world," says Sam with a smile.

The Samsung Corby PRO 8531S is among the affordable touchscreen phones introduced in the market by Samsung to cater to the youth who are now obsessed with social networking sites, instant social messaging, and multimedia.

The other cool touchscreen phones, which include the Corby M91 and the 8531S Wi-Fi, since their prices are lower to mid-range levels — can now also be enjoyed by the students and people whose budgets are normally challenged.

The 3G-enabled Samsung Corby PRO 8531S, the intermediate version among the group, has an SRP of P11,800, while the 8531S Wi-Fi which features a full touch screen with slide-out QWERTY keyboard retails at P8,300, and the more affordable of the three, the Corby M91, is a 2.6-G full touch screen phone that comes in four vibrant colors: yellow, orange, pink and white and has an SRP of P7,800.

These phones have become more than devices that allow a person to just call or send text messages. These phones, which feature the most amazing touch user interface, are cool phones of the moment. And Sam just loves the value offering one.

Sam, whose screen partners include actresses Toni Gonzaga, Bea Alonzo and Anne Curtis, is currently in the tele-series "Iposcots" where he is a character role opposite actress Maja Salvador.

A 50-YEAR-OLD bungalow was transformed into a two-story, shaped home that integrates the landscape into the interiors. Budji Laying's signature features outdoor terraces, done in PVC, and a tropical water slide.

STAIRWELL was the space between the master and another. Floor-to-ceiling wall on the side brings in the light and provides privacy. Clear glass below the stairway reveals private garden.

Multi-consideration with grand view is the formal dining room. The red velvet runner draws out against the neutral background.

'50s bungalow transformed into showcase of light and space

By Margy Enriquez

ENTREPRENEUR MR. CRISTINA "Mikol" Placencia has wanted a home that would build his reputation—one of elegance, such as a showcase of the landscape and nature of local craftsmanship, and a showcase of his hospitality that the home must also be contemporary and functional.

He sought out the built living + lived family architectural and interior design firm, whose sensibilities echoed his objectives. Brian is known in the design industry for his craft and ability and functioning inside the industry. She doesn't leave the house and doesn't leave the house.

The house lived in a family-owned one in Makati, but as the last child grew, more space was needed.

The family of five looked for a house that was modern and functional, and provided them with a house in the city, built in 1950 by King Brothers, owner of the once-famous Makati restaurant.

For the mid-century modern design, the family of five, who lived in the house, wanted a house that was modern and functional, and provided them with a house in the city, built in 1950 by King Brothers, owner of the once-famous Makati restaurant.

Laying and Placencia made advantage of the land—there is a modern house in the city, built in 1950 by King Brothers, owner of the once-famous Makati restaurant.

"They wanted to add more and a second level. We followed the footprint of the original plan, raised the ceiling, and made the whole live floor into an entertainment area. It's a modern tropical approach, highlighting Philippine design and material," says Laying.

It turned out to be a modern house in the city, built in 1950 by King Brothers, owner of the once-famous Makati restaurant.

From a busy shell, the house became a grouping of three vertical blocks divided by two, with a multi-level canopy adding drama. Windows and doors were given large dimensions. The open spaces and rooms were given height to create a sense of openness.

In the house, people experience different spaces as they move around.

Contrasting exposures Placencia explains there's a promise of revealing and revealing. There are moments of exposure in some areas, and others in others.

The living room is near the garage. He didn't want the car to be exposed. The driveway disappears from view. From inside, you won't see the car because windows were installed to hide the height of the car. In short, you see the landscape of the garage, not a car in the driveway," says Placencia.

The colorful driveway also adds to the living floor. It's part of the landscape. The staircase is an independent unit that unifies the public area on the ground floor and private quarters on the top floor. A central point of natural glass connects the view of the driveway.

"There's just a living of light, and you're in the other side," says Placencia.

LONG horizontal line of the living room, which is a multi-level table with a canopy on top of the roof, makes the floor. Laying's elevated opening with porch in the solidified feeling of the room.

For designer Maricris Brias, Budji-Royal creates a home that conceals and reveals—one filled with art, wood and her own trademark indigenous fabrics

Budji Laying, Royal Placencia and Maricris Brias collaborate on this project where space is designed to be a living of light and space—great that indigenous elements will with their modernism.

The living ended by the three levels is a result of the successful flow of space. The ground floor has a large, open-plan living area.

From the floor, the space built out, with a sense of the garden and private pool. Within the open plan, the space then, from central exposure, reveals a large outdoor living area—out of the house to the other side, there are patios that partly extend into the outdoors.

"You don't feel that the space is really existing inside. Instead, by creating these dimensions, there is a suggestion of a modern space behind them," says Placencia.

The formal bedrooms were converted into a multi-purpose room for guests, sleeping quarters, and a family room. A large bed is made for guests.

"You wouldn't think it was the best," says Placencia.

From the living room to the kitchen, designer Maricris Brias designed the kitchen area with an island topped by a chip glass top.

Family quarters The second floor is family quarters. With the large, modern windows, one doesn't feel isolated. Instead, they capture the exposure of the space and the sky. The floor is covered with natural stone tiles, which is a living of light and space.

The production of the house creates the feel of a modern, in the way it is a combination of the past and the future. The floor is covered with natural stone tiles, which is a living of light and space.

Final collection of nature is a modern house. From the living room to the kitchen, designer Maricris Brias designed the kitchen area with an island topped by a chip glass top.

The living room is near the garage. He didn't want the car to be exposed. The driveway disappears from view. From inside, you won't see the car because windows were installed to hide the height of the car. In short, you see the landscape of the garage, not a car in the driveway," says Placencia.

"There's just a living of light, and you're in the other side," says Placencia.
